It was Ruben Martinez who adapted the comic-style illustrations to the miniatures used in the projects in which Big Child Creatives was involved, setting the painting style of these projects. Among others, you may recall the Marvel United series, where Ruben changed the traditional way in which the miniatures were painted.

Vibrant colours, smooth transitions in some areas alongside bold and sudden colour changes in others, rim-lights... and above all a fresh approach, are the characteristics for which this 'Chibi style' has become known. Now you have the chance to learn from the very source of it all!

To top it all of students will be invited to a discord channel where you will find all information you need. Ruben will be available for feedback to finish your project. There will also be other general discussion threads where he hopes the students will be able to meet up and chat about painting miniatures.

Students should bring their favourite paints(water based acrylic primary colours and a handful of secondary/tertiary colours , brushes, wet palette, something to hold your miniature, blue-tack and if possible (but not required) airbrush travel kit and compressor
